

Do your Best.—This is our advice to young farmers, young mechanics and young men, of every calling and profession—do your best. In every thing you undertake, exert every faculty to do well.

New England Farmer.

Labor and its Rewards.

There is a great difference in the relation which capital bears to labor in this country and in Europe; in Europe capital is the master of labor; in this country labor is the master of capital. The law of supply and demand regulates all things; capital, labor, even the increase and decrease of population itself. The National Era lately published the following interesting facts relative to wages of labor:

"When I was a little boy," said a gentleman one evening, "I paid a visit to my grandfather; his venerable breeches, and huge silver buckles filled me with great awe.—When I went to bid him good-bye, he drew me between his knees, and placing his hand on my head, said, 'Grand-child, I have one thing to say to you; will you remember it?' I stared into his face and nodded, for I was afraid to promise aloud.—'Well,' continued, 'whatever you do, do the best you can.'

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

Here then was the key to the man's character. He is considered one of the best business men, and one of the best citizens, one of the best officers in the church, one of the best neighbors, fathers, husbands, friends; in a word he is universally beloved and respected. And what is the secret of it all? He always tried to do the best he could. Let every boy and girl take this for their motto. Acted upon, it will do wonders for you. It will bring out powers and capabilities which will surprise and delight yourselves and your friends. "Do your best," or as the Bible has it, "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might;" or in other words, "Whatsoever you do, do heartily as to the Lord."

Milch Cows.

I have never kept more than from twelve to fifteen cows, and so far as my experience goes, I have come to the conclusion that it is best to keep good ones, and no more than I can keep well. When they come to the barn in the fall, I am careful to give them a change of feed as much as possible. To those that do not give milk, I give the poorer hay, and occasionally corn husks, stalks, &c., until about six weeks before calving, when I give them better hay and some grain. By this way of managing, the flesh that the cow puts on by her own industry in summer, is easily kept on through the winter, with a little extra care, which enables her to bring us a good, strong, healthy calf, worth at least five dollars when four weeks old. To the cows that I milk through the winter, I give good hay, giving them for a change a tattering of clover, husks and rye (if we have it) almost every day. The clover I always intend to use up before the first of March, I feed them on the chop twice a day, mixing a few hours before feeding, giving them about four quarts of short, and two quarts of cob-meal a day, with about half a bushel of cut hay of poor quality, with a tablespoonful of salt at each time of feeding. This I think produces more milk than the same quantity of grain given in any other way. Great care should be taken not to excite the cow when driving to water or the pasture. If the boys must drive them, do not let but one drive at a time. Kindness pours out the milk and lays on the fat. Kicking cows are always plenty where there are kicking milkers. I know it by experience. It is an old and true saying, that "good pastures make fat calves," and it is equally true, that much feed makes much milk. As to the different breeds of cows I have not had much experience. I have one that is called the cream-pot breed, which is one of the best I have ever owned for milk. There are quite a number of half-blooded Ayrshires in the neighborhood, which have the name and appearance of being good milkers. I am rather partial to the old native breed for milkers, when I can get the right pattern; that is, I want a cow of good size, one that will make five and a half or six hundred of beef when fatted; wide between the eyes, small horns, long slender neck, head inclining downward, rather a thin skin, broad across the kidneys, small tail, small flat legs, the udder large, running well forward and back, equally quartered, and the teats well apart, thin thighs, and last, though not least, a large crooked milk-vein running well forward, with a large hole at the end.

One thing more should be taken into consideration, and that is, the disposition, which can almost always be told by the countenance. Tame-ness and docility of temper greatly enhance the value. One that feeds at ease, and does not break over fences, and is kind to her associates, will always yield more milk than one of the opposite disposition. When I buy a cow of the above description, I am pretty sure I have got a good one, and think the above marks are a very safe guide to purchase by.

New England Farmer.

There is a great difference in the relation which capital bears to labor in this country and in Europe; in Europe capital is the master of labor; in this country labor is the master of capital. The law of supply and demand regulates all things; capital, labor, even the increase and decrease of population itself. The National Era lately published the following interesting facts relative to wages of labor:

"When I was a little boy," said a gentleman one evening, "I paid a visit to my grandfather; his venerable breeches, and huge silver buckles filled me with great awe.—When I went to bid him good-bye, he drew me between his knees, and placing his hand on my head, said, 'Grand-child, I have one thing to say to you; will you remember it?' I stared into his face and nodded, for I was afraid to promise aloud.—'Well,' continued, 'whatever you do, do the best you can.'

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

Here then was the key to the man's character. He is considered one of the best business men, and one of the best citizens, one of the best officers in the church, one of the best neighbors, fathers, husbands, friends; in a word he is universally beloved and respected. And what is the secret of it all? He always tried to do the best he could. Let every boy and girl take this for their motto. Acted upon, it will do wonders for you. It will bring out powers and capabilities which will surprise and delight yourselves and your friends. "Do your best," or as the Bible has it, "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might;" or in other words, "Whatsoever you do, do heartily as to the Lord."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father's legacy to me, and it has proved better than gold. I never forgot his words, and I have tried to act upon them. After reaching home, my uncle gave Marcus and me some weeding to do in the garden. It was Wednesday afternoon, and we had laid our plans for something else. Marcus, fretted and ill humored at his disappointment, did not more than half do his work; and I being pretty much like him, until grandfather's advice came into my mind, and I determined to follow it; in a word, I did my best. And when my uncle came out, I shall never forget his look of approbation, as his eyes glanced over my beds, or the fourpence he slipped into my hand afterwards, because as he said, my work was well done.—Ah, I was a glad and a thankful boy while poor Marcus was left to drudge over his beds all the afternoon."

"At fifteen, I was sent to the Academy where I had to earn my own way through the course. The lessons came hard at first, for I was not fond of study; but grandfather's advice was my motto, and I tried to do my best. As a consequence of this, though I was small of my age and not very strong, my mother had three offers for me before the year was out, and one was from the best merchant in the village, a place whose store was considered very desirable."

"This in fact was my father